SOCIAL.

The order was received this week at the Ladies' Sewing Guild for equipment for a ship leaving shortly. There has been some discussion as to the points to be finished in time, although only a notice was given. An urgent order is being made in need of a constant supply of workers to meet the demand made. The Guild has received a letter from Mrs. J. H. B. Smith, 210 Pitt-st., Sydney, who has been asked to contribute to the fund. The Guild has received a letter from Mrs. J. H. B. On Thursday a meeting was held at 111, Kent-st., where arrangements were made for a stage in connection with the forthcoming performance of "Joan of Arc" at the theatre Royal Saturday, in aid of the fund. REAL ESTATE.

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

The real estate market again showed slight signs of improvement this week and was, generally speaking, a good deal of activity as far as inquiries and general business were concerned. The sales were, however, not so numerous as last week. The agents are finding it difficult to bring buyer and seller to the one level in respect to price. There is still the same difference between the reserve, and the amount offered. It is a great difference, but it is just that little which is making all the difference in the number of contracts issued.

People are realizing that real estate is the soundest of all investments at a time like this, providing the property purchased is in a good position, and shows a fair return on the money invested, but owners will insist that the value should be as high to-day as it was before the war, while speculators maintain that they are entitled to a wider margin of profit just now, and it does seem that the position is not one easily altered.

The excitement of the week centred in the sale on Monday, at the rooms of Messrs. Hardie and Gorman, where the hotel property at the corner of George and King streets, along with the shops in King-street, and those in George-street, down to the arcade, including the arcade buildings, came under the hammer. The auction room was uncomfortably crowded, but Mr. Henry Gorman, who occupied the auctioneer's stand, got a bid for the hotel property at a reasonable figure.

the allied countries. In Roumania will prove the best answer imaginable. German intrigues, and to the gloom prophesies of a section of the British press in Germany it will kill the last remnant of hope of a peace before the winter of any one of the Allies. The Germans now begin to realise that, in spite of all that they have inflicted, they are the only nation who have not lost the thought of peace. They are, no doubt the only nation, with the exception of British, which has any conquered territory to bargain with. But only the most sufficient among the German leaders now persuade themselves that other nations are waiting to offer peace a price which would render material advantages. In August last year, when they were twice offered their political and economic independence if they would sacrifice their honour. The same offer was now to the Servians. The Germans have now suffered the bitter humiliation of a refusal from two small nations, each then conscious of the price of its refusal, and each temporarily beyond the reach of help from its allies. It is not to be derived that a German newspaper should compare these refusals with the success of the national arms, and appear disheartened at the contrast. The reason for this is not lie in any want of zeal or excessive scepticism among the German diplomats. It is the bitter experience of small nations, which will not well be understood, to regard the idea of peace with a terrorous Germany as inconceivable.

THE FIFTY THOUSAND.

Regarded by numbers alone, the German march was perhaps somewhat disappointing; but there were special reasons why we could not expect the numbers to be very large at that time. Many would have liked to join the snowball as they were busy with harvesting operations, they will take their place in camp later—probably when Captain Hitchens harvests the second contingent from the north, which will be the last of the harvest. But the success of the march on the first country route march that we have seen—is not to be measured in numbers but in its results. It appealed to the imagination of our people, and it has stirred other districts in the State to emulate its splendid example. The Gligandra has been the subject of a collection of "Caroost," "Waratahs" and the Riverina "Men from the Snowy River" in the Gungaharo and other men from the northern districts will shortly be following. The important one is that bids fair to take the whole State in its embrace. Indeed, it has already spread to other States. The march of the young men into Brisbane, and the march of country men into Brisbane, whilst the men are marching the women of the towns they pass through are willing to do them honour and provide them with comforts. It is just a question whether the good times they are having at the receptions, the concerts, the dances, the parties, the collection of money, the signature of a triumphal program are worth the marches. Indeed, the opinion has been voiced by some that it would be better if the men to take train and reach camp at the earliest possible moment, in order that they might the sooner get into training for the real business in hand. But we must remember that the march is the only way these marches is to gather in new recruits by appealing to the young men of the country towns along the route. Nothing more calculated to stir into action the thoughtless young men to whom local authorities bulk larger than the interests of the nation than the sight of the marchers, and the marchers are the only ones who have heard the call of duty. They may be fated, they may be having, as of them put it, "The time of their lives" but these men are under no delusion: they know what lies ahead. They know the conditions of camp life are not as a lot of roses, and they know that where fighting will be they will have enough to do without anything more, but they have chosen their choice. It is for those who are out of the fold and are fit in mind and body to consider their position, so, whether, too, may choose the better part when it is too late. The Prime Minister has promised another fifty thousand to the British Government, and it is to be hoped that the Government will be required for reinforcements every month, and we must hope the promise.

It is a giant task, and we must meet it like a giant—in order that we may not be a barbarous nation that uses its strength with the tyranny of a giant. A nation that makes war as Germany makes war, is a nation that will never know peace, and never can be, until that it is as strong as the British Empire, and the Australians should count it a privilege to have some share in its conquest of such an enemy. It is gratifying to reflect that the Universal League proposes to suspend its campaign and give loyal assistance to the British Government in order to meet the required number of volunteers. This assistance will be welcomed, in our campaign its leaders have been actuated only by the highest motives. They are men who know the seriousness of the situation and how necessary it is that every able-bodied man should take his field in defence of the Empire, and that every man should be prepared to fight; but we cannot run faster than the pace that is set us by those in authority, and as long as we meet every appeal made by the Government, which knows the requirements of the situation. Above all, knows the possibilities in the matter of equipping and transporting volunteers, one can say that the volunteer system has failed. Now we are put to rest. With a couple of hundred thousand men already drawn from the Commonwealth, it will not be the easiest thing in the world to get 50,000 more from the ranks of those who remain; but it does not will be done, if it is not done, the volunteer system has failed. But in the meantime we ask the members of the Universal League to step into this great recruiting movement and help by every means in their power to raise the new force. We would urge upon the authorities the services of our returned soldiers, and of the police, and of the volunteer contingents. These men know how to do the need is, and they have a right of talking to our young men that is worth more than all the oratory of politicians. Just plain, blunt men that love their fellow men and speak right on, saying: "You are young men, you are not soldiers, but men, and you are the police, and you are the men that men will tell of or again their children and their grandchildren. It is wonder is that any of our young men do not for military service, and bound by the very strongest ties, can stay at home in these great days and not in the front line. The men who have fought in the front line will tell you that they do not want to go back with their country, and they will tell you that they will carry others to rally round the flag, and they will tell you that they will carry others of those of them who are

ITALY.

TO HELP SERVIA.

THE WEST.

ALLIES' ACTIVITY.

Baron Sonnino (Italian Minister for Foreign Affairs) has announced that Italy will speedily do everything possible to assist the Serbian army.

Greece, he stated, had given the required assurances.

"Italy," the Minister concluded, "will pursue the war with all her strength and at all costs and every sacrifice."

German wounded soldiers say that the Allies' guns on the western front do not give them a moment's rest. The shells pour in like hail stones.

In opening the Japanese Diet the Emperor emphasised that Japan's alliance with England and Russia were strengthening.

A French communique states that important damage was done by the French artillery to Turkish works in the Dardanelles.

Mr. Asquith stated in the House of Commons that the British casualties—naval and military—to November 9, totalled 510,230.

DARDANELLES.

FRENCH REPORT.

ARTILLERY BUSY.

TURKISH WORKS DESTROYED.

LONDON, Dec. 3. A French communique states: The artillery has been active in the Dardanelles on the 2nd. We did important damage to Turkish works. The weather has been sunny, but is now milder.

POOD VERY DEAR. Mr. Ward Price, telegraphing from Belgrade, says a Greek who has arrived from Constantinople reports that food is very dear. The casualties among the Turks at the Dardanelles are estimated at 30,000. Many of the sick are ill-shod when they arrive from Gallipoli.

The Turks maintain that the Dardanelles must be forced, and look forward to the day when German ammunition will enable them to drive off the Allies.

The Greek said that a battery of German 10-inch guns had been sent to Chanak. It is likely to be five weeks before railway communication with Austria is re-established, the Servians having greatly damaged the Nish-Belgrade section.

BERLIN TO BAGHDAD. Dr. Schott, Director of the Hamburg Observatory, describes the Dardanelles as the most important of the future, namely, the Berlin-Vienna-Constantinople-Baghdad railway. The Persian Gulf-Baghdad Ocean route would be secure and permanently open, and would be vital to the Central Powers.

GERMANY'S HOPES. An Amsterdam message states: The debate by the Bavarian Landtag on the economic situation, indicates that Germany hopes to monopolise the trade in the Near East.

QUESTION IN THE COMMONS. In the House of Commons to-day Mr. Arthur Lynch (Nationalist) asked Mr. Asquith if opportunity would be given to debate the military diplomatic disposition which had led to the present position in the Near East and at the Dardanelles.

Mr. Asquith said he would consider the matter, but would not give an undertaking.

ENEMY REPORTS. An Austrian communique states: We marched into Ploesti on the 2nd. Montenegro, frontier, 30 miles north-west of Novi-Sad after a stubborn battle.

A Berlin communique states that the Germans have captured 4000 Servians south-west of Mitrovica.

A letter from the German High Command states that the German High Command is preparing to attack the Serbian army in the near future.

BRITISH CASUALTIES. TOTAL OF 510,230.

In the House of Commons to-night the Minister (Mr. Asquith), in reply to Mr. A. H. H. (Liberal member for Duffryshire), said the total British casualties to November 9 were:

WESTERN FRONT. Officers. Men. Killed. 4020. 49,272. Wounded. 9754. 240,263. Missing. 1383. 54,446.

MEDITERRANEAN FORCES. Officers. Men. Killed. 1504. 21,331. Wounded. 2880. 70,148. Missing. 304. 10,211.

Casualties in the Navy and other branches of the war, continued Mr. Asquith, bring the total casualties to 510,230. Replying to Mr. Leach in the House of Commons Mr. Tennant (Under-Secretary for War) said the casualties at Loos and during the last three months numbered 8,000. The Australian casualties on Gallipoli, including the New Zealanders, were 2,000.

ITALY'S DECISION.

TO HELP SERVIA.

GREEK ASSURANCES.

LONDON, Dec. 1.

A crowded and expectant Chamber of Deputies in Rome received with loud applause, the important statement of Baron Sonnino, Italian Minister for Foreign Affairs, on the position of the Empire's negotiations with Greece, and Italy's own relations with Serbia which hitherto have been shrouded in mystery.

Baron Sonnino said Greece's attitude at one time gave rise to anxiety, but the situation happily had been cleared up. Greece had given the required assurances and there was every reason to believe that a satisfactory settlement would be reached regarding the free and freedom of movement of the Allies in Macedonia. The presence of the Italian flag on the other side of the Adriatic would constitute a reaffirmation of Italy's traditional policy including the maintenance of Albanian independence.

The strategic defence of the Adriatic was another aim of Italy's policy. Italy had signed the agreement not to conclude a separate peace.

"Serbia's independence is of the greatest importance to Italy," continued Baron Sonnino. "Her absorption by Austria would constitute a great danger. Italy cannot remain deaf to Serbia's appeal. She will speedily do everything possible to assist in Serbian arms in agreement with the Allies we have laid down that a complete restoration of Serbian independence shall be an indispensable condition of the termination of the war."

HOOR OF VENGEANCE. "The heartrending appeal coming across the Adriatic could not be resisted. Italy, with the Allies, would ensure the revivification of the Servians, and their ammunition supply, and would also facilitate the hour of vengeance. Italian arms, with tenacity, self-sacrifice, and dash were carrying out the reconquest of the natural frontiers, and gates of Italy. Jealous guardianship of vital interests in the Mediterranean was also important. Several months spent in war showed it was necessary as a public testimony to the solidarity of the Allies that the formal signature of our adhesion should be given in London. The attitude of Greece momentarily created certain tension, but the situation was quickly eased by an exchange of notes. Greece has now consented to give the required assurances, harmonising with her preceding declaration of benevolent neutrality."

"Thus," he concluded, "there is reason to hope hereafter that the European and Balkan situation, the most cordial relations will be resumed with Greece. Consequently, it will be easy to settle questions of guarantees for the liberty of movement of the Allied troops in Salonica and the safety of their lines of communication and railway transport for our supplies."

The statement was received with great cheering, and cries of "Viva la Serbia."

Baron Sonnino concluded with the impressive declaration: "Italy will pursue the war with all her strength and at all costs, and every sacrifice."

RUSSIANS ON DANUBE. The Bucharest correspondent of the Milan newspaper "Corriere della Sera" says that German boats are cruising day and night in the Danube on the shore of Bessarabia. A Zeppelin has arrived at Bucharest on the Danube, 41 miles south of Bessarabia. The Austro-Germans have taken intimidatory measures on the Bulgarian bank. Austrian monitors have been withdrawn from Orsova for fear of being frozen in.

MONTENEGRO REPORT. A Montenegrin communique reports a sharp fight at Fotcha on the Serbian-Bulgarian frontier, 31 miles south-east of Sarajevo. The Austrians retreated in disorder.

POSITION AT MONASTIR. Conflicting reports have been received of the position at Monastir. The latest Athens advices state that although the Servians evacuated the town the Bulgarians have not yet occupied it.

A French communique states: The Servians have still occupying Monastir on December 1.

Messages from Salonica state that 4000 recruits sent to join General Vassiliak arrived in a state of exhaustion, after marching 18 days, their only food being half a loaf apiece a day. Eight thousand people in a drying condition have been reported in the public square. Four hundred were placed in six wagons and sent to Gohrida, no doctor accompanying them, although the journey occupied three days and three nights.

The "Tempe" states that the Bulgarians who crossed the Upper Verna have taken possession of all bridges and roads leading to Monastir. The Bulgarians are constituting a new army in the Struma valley.

ENEMY REPORTS. An Austrian communique states: We marched into Ploesti on the 2nd. Montenegro, frontier, 30 miles north-west of Novi-Sad after a stubborn battle.

A Berlin communique states that the Germans have captured 4000 Servians south-west of Mitrovica.

In the House of Commons to-night the Minister (Mr. Asquith), in reply to Mr. A. H. H. (Liberal member for Duffryshire), said the total British casualties to November 9 were:

WESTERN FRONT. Officers. Men. Killed. 4020. 49,272. Wounded. 9754. 240,263. Missing. 1383. 54,446.

MEDITERRANEAN FORCES. Officers. Men. Killed. 1504. 21,331. Wounded. 2880. 70,148. Missing. 304. 10,211.

Casualties in the Navy and other branches of the war, continued Mr. Asquith, bring the total casualties to 510,230. Replying to Mr. Leach in the House of Commons Mr. Tennant (Under-Secretary for War) said the casualties at Loos and during the last three months numbered 8,000. The Australian casualties on Gallipoli, including the New Zealanders, were 2,000.

ITALY'S DECISION.

TO HELP SERVIA.

GREEK ASSURANCES.

LONDON, Dec. 1.

A crowded and expectant Chamber of Deputies in Rome received with loud applause, the important statement of Baron Sonnino, Italian Minister for Foreign Affairs, on the position of the Empire's negotiations with Greece, and Italy's own relations with Serbia which hitherto have been shrouded in mystery.

Baron Sonnino said Greece's attitude at one time gave rise to anxiety, but the situation happily had been cleared up. Greece had given the required assurances and there was every reason to believe that a satisfactory settlement would be reached regarding the free and freedom of movement of the Allies in Macedonia. The presence of the Italian flag on the other side of the Adriatic would constitute a reaffirmation of Italy's traditional policy including the maintenance of Albanian independence.

The strategic defence of the Adriatic was another aim of Italy's policy. Italy had signed the agreement not to conclude a separate peace.

"Serbia's independence is of the greatest importance to Italy," continued Baron Sonnino. "Her absorption by Austria would constitute a great danger. Italy cannot remain deaf to Serbia's appeal. She will speedily do everything possible to assist in Serbian arms in agreement with the Allies we have laid down that a complete restoration of Serbian independence shall be an indispensable condition of the termination of the war."

HOOR OF VENGEANCE. "The heartrending appeal coming across the Adriatic could not be resisted. Italy, with the Allies, would ensure the revivification of the Servians, and their ammunition supply, and would also facilitate the hour of vengeance. Italian arms, with tenacity, self-sacrifice, and dash were carrying out the reconquest of the natural frontiers, and gates of Italy. Jealous guardianship of vital interests in the Mediterranean was also important. Several months spent in war showed it was necessary as a public testimony to the solidarity of the Allies that the formal signature of our adhesion should be given in London. The attitude of Greece momentarily created certain tension, but the situation was quickly eased by an exchange of notes. Greece has now consented to give the required assurances, harmonising with her preceding declaration of benevolent neutrality."

"Thus," he concluded, "there is reason to hope hereafter that the European and Balkan situation, the most cordial relations will be resumed with Greece. Consequently, it will be easy to settle questions of guarantees for the liberty of movement of the Allied troops in Salonica and the safety of their lines of communication and railway transport for our supplies."

The statement was received with great cheering, and cries of "Viva la Serbia."

Baron Sonnino concluded with the impressive declaration: "Italy will pursue the war with all her strength and at all costs, and every sacrifice."

RUSSIANS ON DANUBE. The Bucharest correspondent of the Milan newspaper "Corriere della Sera" says that German boats are cruising day and night in the Danube on the shore of Bessarabia. A Zeppelin has arrived at Bucharest on the Danube, 41 miles south of Bessarabia. The Austro-Germans have taken intimidatory measures on the Bulgarian bank. Austrian monitors have been withdrawn from Orsova for fear of being frozen in.

MONTENEGRO REPORT. A Montenegrin communique reports a sharp fight at Fotcha on the Serbian-Bulgarian frontier, 31 miles south-east of Sarajevo. The Austrians retreated in disorder.

POSITION AT MONASTIR. Conflicting reports have been received of the position at Monastir. The latest Athens advices state that although the Servians evacuated the town the Bulgarians have not yet occupied it.

A French communique states: The Servians have still occupying Monastir on December 1.
